

Clinical Management in Primary Health Care: AGNP-PC IV

6 credits

This is a culminating clinical course in which students are managing client care with increasing independence. The collaborative model guides the student in implementing and evaluating accepted medical and nursing interventions used in the care of the patients across the lifespan. Students further develop leadership, research, teaching, and consultation skills as a basis for clinical practice. Practice issues are identified and discussed in a structured environment that incorporates ethical concepts and effective use of resources for beginning autonomous practice. Theoretical concepts of organizational systems and health care politics and policy are applied to the advanced practice setting to identify and solve complex problems.
