Five steps to turn on your baby’s calming reflex - Five “S’s”

1. Swaddling
Tightly wrapping your baby with the arms down provides the touching and support the baby experienced while still in your belly.

2. Side (or stomach)
While holding your baby, place them either on their left side or stomach to provide loving support. Once your baby is happily asleep in your arms, you can safely put baby on their back for sleeping in the crib.

3. Shushing
These noises sound like the blood flowing in your body. The noise your baby heard is as loud as a vacuum. Shush as loud as the baby is crying. This noise can also be made in the form of a vacuum cleaner, a hair dryer, or a fan.

4. Swinging
Newborns are used to the swinging motions that were present when they were in your body. Every step you took, every movement caused a swinging motion for your baby. Rocking, car rides, and other swinging movements all can help.

5. Sucking
Sucking calms babies by satisfying their hunger and by turning on their calming reflex. This can be accomplished with breast, bottle, pacifier or even a finger.

The Happiest Baby on the Block method by Dr. Harvey Karp, helps calm babies by letting them feel like they are back inside their mom’s body. There are five parts to this method which work very well to calm a crying baby, and in many cases help a baby go to sleep. Some babies need all five S’s together, while others need just a few to help calm them down.

New York Rolls Out New Booster Seat Law

As of November 24, 2009, New York State law now requires children up to the age of 8, or at least 4’9” tall, to be in booster seats. Previously, the law required children up to the age of 7 to be in booster seats. Although not required by law, it is recommended that some children 8 years old and older stay in a booster seat. Ask yourself the following questions:
- Do your child’s knees bend naturally over the edge of the vehicle seat?
- Does the shoulder belt stay on your child’s shoulder and not on the neck or face?
- Does the lap belt stay on the child’s hips and not ride up on his or her stomach?

If you answered no to any of the above questions, keep your child in a booster seat—he or she will be more safe AND comfortable. Do you need a car seat or booster seat? Call the Car Seat Program at 435-8485 for a low-cost car seat or booster seat.
