Steve Allen, Jr., MD, to present Weiskotten Lecture Sept. 20

Steve Allen Jr., MD, will present "Juggling Life's Stress," at the annual Weiskotten Lecture, Friday, Sept. 20 at 4 p.m. in the Weiskotten Hall Ninth Floor auditorium. The lecture is free and open to the public and is a highlight of Upstate Medical University's 127th College of Medicine Reunion. The reunion will be held Friday and Saturday, Sept. 20 and 21. The Weiskotten Lecture and Reunion 2002 is sponsored by the Medical Alumni Foundation at Upstate Medical University and Upstate's College of Medicine.

Dr. Allen is a SUNY Upstate family practice physician and faculty member who promotes humor as a powerful healing tool. He delights thousands of business, industry and health care people each year with his lighthearted and energizing look at coping in a changing world. He focuses on humor and playfulness as our most important tools for survival, at work and at home.

The Weiskotten Lecture will be immediately followed by an awards ceremony honoring Leonard Marmor, MD, (Class of 1952) and Debra Buchan, MD, (Class of 1987).

Dr. Marmor will receive the Distinguished Alumnus award for his work as a pioneering orthopaedic surgeon in the field of joint replacements and for his outstanding generosity as a philanthropist.

Dr. Buchan will receive the Outstanding Young Alumna award. She was nominated for her dedication to her patients as an internist and teacher at Upstate Medical University where she has helped to institute a new pilot program of mentoring and student advisement.

This year's reunion also includes a dedication of the newly-renovated Weiskotten Hall ninth

SUNY Upstate study shows good marriage lessens stress of diabetes.

People with diabetes who are part of an intimate and supportive marriage are more likely to have a better health-related quality of life than their less happily married peers, a new SUNY Upstate Medical University study suggests.

"When people have a solid marriage and a good intimate relationship, they adapt better to their diabetes and feel less burdened by the disease," said one of the study's authors, Paula M. Trief, Ph.D., associate professor of psychiatry and medicine at SUNY Upstate. The report is published in the July issue of Diabetes Care.

Trief and her colleagues surveyed 78 diabetic individuals asking them to assess the level of intimacy in their relationship and their level of marital satisfaction. In addition they were asked how much distress they were experiencing related to their diabetes

SUNY Upstate study shows good marriage lessens stress of diabetes.

People with diabetes who are part of an intimate and supportive marriage are more likely to have a better health-related quality of life than their less happily married peers, a new SUNY Upstate Medical University study suggests.

“When people have a solid marriage and a good intimate relationship, they adapt better to their diabetes and feel less burdened by the disease,” said one of the study’s authors, Paula M. Trief, Ph.D., associate professor of psychiatry and medicine at SUNY Upstate. The report is published in the July issue of Diabetes Care.

Trief and her colleagues surveyed 78 diabetic individuals asking them to assess the level of intimacy in their relationship and their level of marital satisfaction. In addition they were asked how much distress they were experiencing related to their diabetes and how much it interferes with, and negatively impacts, their lives. Follow-up interviews were performed two years after the initial survey.

“Data collected from these patients indicate that individuals who described a better overall marital adjustment and higher levels of perceived intimacy at one time reported less diabetes-related distress and greater satisfaction with how they adapted to their illness two years later,” Trief said.

However, researchers could not conclude from their findings that marital happiness and intimacy can predict a higher overall health-related quality of life.

“The findings are specific to diabetes care,” Trief noted. “Marital support is extremely valuable and relevant to diabetes care, where spouses may be involved in many healthcare-related activities such as keeping track of and administering medications, buying and preparing foods and participating in regular exercise.”

Adjusting to a chronic illness like diabetes requires significant life changes on the part of spouses and patients, Trief said. “When these adjustments must occur in a distant and less satisfying relationship, the conflict that can develop may lead to a poorer adjustment to the illness for the patient and poorer quality of life,” she noted.

In light of the findings, researchers suggest that physicians may want to actively involve

Dr. Kessler to present Hot Topics in Research Sept. 6

“Chronic Clinical Breast Pain Associated with Fibrocystic Breasts” is the topic of the next “Hot Topics in Research” program, Friday, Sept. 6 in the Doust Boardroom on the ninth floor of Weiskotten Hall. The lecture is presented by Jack Kessler, PhD, chief executive officer of Symbolon Pharmaceuticals in Massachusetts. Lunch will be served at 11:45 a.m. with the lecture to follow at noon. The lecture is sponsored by SUNY Upstate’s Clinical Trials Office Education Fund. RSVP to Anita Carroll at 464-5476.

Recruitment for the Leukemia & Lymphoma “Light The Night” walk underway at Upstate

Twenty-seven Upstate employees will serve as team captains at the upcoming Light the Night Walk, to be held Thursday, Sept. 19 beginning 5:30 p.m. at Long Branch Park, East Shore Trail, Liverpool. The walk is a 1.8 mile sunset walk.

To participate or for more information, call Rita Holbrook, 464-4523, or Linda Gruninger, 464-2044, or visit www.upstate.edu and link to special events.

Two-day program planned in recognition of events of Sept. 11

The CNY Gathers committee has planned an evening of healing and remembrance for the public, Wednesday, Sept. 11, beginning at 7 p.m., in Clinton Square. The program features local talent, speakers and includes a keynote address by James Horn, former FBI agent and leader of the recovery effort in the Oklahoma City bombing disaster.

Gregory L. Eastwood, MD, president of SUNY Upstate, and Chancellor Kenneth Shaw of Syracuse University will lead students and employees on a walk to Clinton Square for this event. Individuals who wish to join the walk should meet in the front of University Hospital at 6:30 p.m.

In addition, the committee has planned a full-day conference for Several members of SUNY Upstate's Executive Council recently toured the third and fourth floors of Weiskotten Hall to assess the progress of a $20 million renovation designed to create larger medical research laboratories and office spaces of contemporary design. The renovations, that include upgraded core services such as heating, ventilating and air conditioning, are projected to be complete by Fall 2003. The third and fourth floors will house new laboratories and offices for the Department of Neuroscience and Physiology and the Department of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology. Coming Soon! New Central Equipment Service Department

Beginning in mid-September, the Central Equipment Service department will assume responsibility for centralized management of all non-unit-based clinical equipment in University Hospital. The core mission of this department is to ensure that clinical staff will have the equipment they need for patient care, when they need it without spending valuable time searching for it. A staff of 12, managed by Don Sadeckas (464-6421), and supported by Keyboard Specialist Nancy Wierzbicki, will provide a 24/7 service consisting of the following:

- Issue of equipment that is currently issued by Central Distribution
- Provision of stretchers and wheelchairs as needed for patient transports
- Re-distribution of IV pumps appropriately on a daily basis throughout patient care areas.
- Movement of beds and cribs on and off in-patient units.
- Management of the replacement of in-patient room furniture (bedside stands, over-bed tables, patient chairs).
- Daily coordination of equipment removal from hallways and lobbies.
- Coordination of the repair of broken or unserviceable equipment with Clinical Engineering and Physical Plant

Central Equipment Service (CES) will be located at 410 W. Basement, University Hospital. The phone number is 464-4486 and fax number is 464 6332. The official start date will be announced in the coming weeks.

Clinical Engineering to Assume New Maintenance Responsibilities

Effective Sept. 1, Clinical Engineering will assume additional maintenance responsibility for all beds, cribs, stretchers and wheelchairs previously maintained by Physical Plant. Contact Clinical Engineering at 464-6067 for repair requests. After hours a technician can be reached by contacting the hospital operator and requesting that the on-call technician be paged.

Payroll Services announces upcoming workshops

All Upstate management and administrative personnel may attend the Payroll Services workshops listed below. All workshops will be held from 9 a.m. to noon in the East Lounge of the Campus Activities Building.

"How SUNY Upstate's CSEA and PEF Employees' Paychecks Are Calculated," will be offered Tuesdays, Sept. 17 and Oct. 1. This course describes the methods to calculate the types of payments made to State employees that are specific to CSEA LPN's and other related positions to nursing areas and PEF registered nurses. The workshop does not include used and accrued time and attendance training that was provided with the Introduction to Payroll and Time and Attendance workshop. The deadline to register for the Sept. 17 workshop is Sept. 10. The Oct. 1 registration deadline is Sept. 24.

"All About Reporting Employee Work Time and Time Accruals and How to Complete a Timesheet," will be offered Wednesday, Oct. 16 and Thursday, Oct. 31. The course explains the types of employee time considered work time and how employees earn and use accruals. The time accrual information covered in the first hour of this workshop is the same as that presented in the Introduction to Payroll and Time and Attendance workshop and individuals who have taken this class may attend at 10:15 a.m. until noon. Participants will be asked to submit to Payroll Services samples of the current types of timesheets that are currently being submitted. The deadline to register for the Oct. 16 class is Oct. 8. The Oct. 31 registration deadline is Oct. 22.

To register or for more information, call Payroll Services at 464-4840.
