

Social Justice in Nursing

3 Credits

This course synthesizes nursing theory, history, practice, education, and activism in an exploration of the construct of “social justice” in nursing. Students in this course will gain an appreciation for the opportunities for the nursing profession to fulfill its potential as a force for socially and structurally just work, as well as the barriers to fulfilling this potential. This course will provide the resources and tools for baccalaureate nurses to use their nursing roles to challenge systems that reinforce health inequities, in order to improve care for patients and communities.
