

Pathology

3 Credits

This course is focused on pathophysiology related to human illness within a systems framework. Factors that contribute to altered physiologic functioning of each body system and the interrelationships among selected pathophysiological processes are explored. Topics will include principles of homeostasis related to human body systems. Select pathophysiological concepts are related to diverse populations across the lifespan.