Hospital City, Health Care Nation: Hospital Costs, Capital, and the Potential For Transformation

Tuesday, Oct. 10, Noon – 1:30 pm.

Guian McKee, PhD

Professor of Presidential Studies; Co-Director, Health Care Policy Project; Co-Chair, Presidential Recordings Program; Miller Center of Public Affairs, University of Virginia

About the Speaker

Dr. McKee is the author of Hospital City, Health Care Nation: Race, Capital, and the Costs of American Health Care. He is an expert on health care policy, Medicare, Medicaid, urban policy and industrial policy. His research focuses on how federal policy, especially in the executive branch, plays out at the local level in American communities.

INTENDED AUDIENCE: ALL PROFESSIONS AND SPECIALTIES

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

Identify the three stages of hospital capital development practices following World War II. Understand how the passage of Medicare and Medicaid facilitated hospitals' entry into bond markets. Recognize how relationships between capital access, insurance coverage, and physical location (rural, suburban, urban) increased inequality among hospitals. Describe the shifting hospital rate regulation since the 1970s and how Maryland preserved and expanded a unique all-payer system. Understand the concept of global hospital budgets; also major policy options for hospital cost control and the connection to wider discussions of health care reform.
