

ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR POSITION

Department of Pharmacology

State University of New York, Upstate Medical University, Syracuse, New York

Applications are invited for a tenure-track faculty position in the Department of Pharmacology. The successful applicant will join a vibrant, collaborative and growing Department, and be expected to develop a well-funded translational research program that complements existing strengths. These include molecular pharmacology, drug development and delivery, nanomedicine, gene therapy, cancer biology and therapeutics, cardiovascular science, epilepsy, metabolic diseases, wound healing, sepsis, immunotherapy and cell signaling. The applicant will also be expected to contribute to graduate and medical teaching. The position is state-supported with a guaranteed full salary, excellent health and retirement benefits, and competitive start-up funds. SUNY Upstate Medical University is the leading academic medical center and largest healthcare provider in central New York. Proximity to Syracuse University, SUNY ESF and VA Medical Center campuses fosters productive scientific interactions and unique collaborative funding opportunities. Syracuse provides a diverse, dynamic, and affordable metropolitan environment with easy access to outstanding recreational opportunities.
